Champion Dahlia Grower, Craneman At Columbia Steel, Has 5000 Plants

Proof that working daily in the scrap yard of Columbia Steel Co., Torrance, for 18 years does not dampen one's artistic abilities, is found in the case of Angie Dellamorte, craneman, who is revealed to be a champion dahlia grower whose blooms measure as much as 15 to 18 inches in diameter. Quiet and steady, Dellamorte, who has not missed a day of his work and never has been late, is not one to boast about the accomplishments on his acre dahlia farm at 4024 W. 102nd st., but it all came to light when someone inquired about the blossoms which decorated the dining room of Palos Verdes Country club for the luncheon Wednesday, Sept. 25, of the directors of United States Steel Corporation. Dellamorte is paying for a home which Dellamorte himself built in 1945, and the house and land soon will be clear of encumbrance.

The craneman has been raising dahlias for eight years, and won the amateur class at the Englewood Dahlia show, one of the largest shows in Southern California in 1944. Dellamorte picks from 60 to 80 dozen dahlias each morning, and has originated more than 12 outstanding new types. "Belle Davis," orchid in color and semi-cactus in form, is the latest type which he has originated. "New World" is another, a dark fuchsia, silver reverse. He has another new specimen which he calls No. 17, of yellow, and still another is being developed, of pure white. Bulbs produced on his one-acre dahlia plot bring as high as $50 each, and he has more than 100 varieties of dahlias among his five thousand plants, not including new seedlings. Mrs. Dellamorte is his assistant.

Fewer Cases of Preventable Disease, Report

There were fewer cases of preventable disease in the Los Angeles County Health Department jurisdiction, which includes Torrance, in 1945 than in any year since 1940. This is the highlight of the annual report of the Los Angeles County Health Department filed Tuesday by Dr. Roy O. Gilbert, Los Angeles County health officer.

In a breakdown of figures from which the annual report was compiled, Torrance comes under the same healthy condition, Dr. Henry C. Smiley, Torrance District health officer said. Diseases reported in this community in 1945 totaled 190 as against 239 in 1944.

In the top group were chickenpox, 31; mumps, 13; scarlet fever, 22; venereal disease, 56; whooping cough, 19, and measles, 17. Births led deaths more than 63% with 252 new babies in Torrance as against 160 deaths.

Other services rendered by the Torrance Health District for the fiscal year included classes for expectant mothers, which were attended by 224 women. Clinics and conferences held in the Tor-

Real glory springs from the silent conquest of ourselves; without that the conqueror is only the first slave. —James Thomson

Torrence Health Center and surrounding area included 161 venereal disease clinics, 97 tuberculosis clinics and 71 well-baby conferences, with a total attendance of 21,215.
